The damage suit of Mrs. Jenks against the Arkansas Pass railroad for the killing of Mr. Jenks some time since was tried in the district court at Cuero Tuesday and Wednesday, going to the jury at noon Wednesday, but up to the hour of going to press, no agreement had been reached. The suit is for $15,000.—Yokum Grade.

The jury were unable to agree and were discharged. They stood eleven for allowing the full amount and one for allowing nothing.

EDITOR GAZETTE:

Nice to play 'hooky' once in a while, isn't it. Reminds me of old times when I was a kid going to school, and how nice it was to play off, especially if I had a hard lesson and had been promised a looking if it was not learned. But Mr. Editor I hope you will forgive me for playing off on you, as it is watermelon time and—well, you know how it is. Stolen melons are the sweetest, especially when taken on the sly, but feel kinder and less having to devour so much, as it would never have done to have thrown any away, as it would have brought everything to light and then you be, isn't it. If I did should catch on to the racket.

Say, for the benefit of those who never have been to Dilworth, and anticipate a visit, I shall warn you to be on to play-actings, if you don't know how, as no one can ever become popular in Dilworth unless they are full-fledged Dilworth players.

Most of our 'bullies'—the and sisters took in 'Mammoth' at Yokum last week.

Mrs. H. K. Jones returned from Gonzales Friday, where she has been spending the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Kennard, who has been very sick.

Mrs. Foster left for San Antonio Monday.

Profs. W. T. and J. W. Smith spent Thursday night in our city. They were enroute to Port Lavaca; they think of making that their future home.

I think there must have been a ball in the city Friday night. Only guessing, you know, from the unusual noise.

Say, I would like to know if any one is ever mistaken for some one else. Some of the readers be kind enough to answer, please.

Say, 'Batch' old fellow, how is it with you? I hope you haven't got 'hitched' and decided that 'blessed singleness' is a thing of the past.

Well, things go wrong with me always. I can never strike such good fortune.

"Though fickle fortune has deceived me, She promised me fair, but performed but ill; Of sweetheart, friends and wealth bereaved me, Yet I bear a heart that shall support me still."—Burns.

Oh pshaw, listen to that will you; just let a fellow get on that subject and if he don't commence whistling After the Ball or reciting sentimental poetry, it is just because he can't.

I hear there is a big meeting going on at Nickel, and of course it is supposed that every fellow and his best girl will be present, so I will square off and get myself ready, and if my best girl and me don't get there it will be because my name isn't.

Texas Red Bugs.

Nowhere in the United States do these ferocious animals flourish like they do here in Texas. A flock of them feasting on a man makes as much noise as a pen full of fat-tening hogs. Some of them found here in Shiner, as big as geese and have tusks hanging down the sides of their jaws like wild hogs. A couple of them can easily carry a man off bodily. This is the time of year when they blossom out in all their glory and, though they delve not nor do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory cannot beat them rustling. These warm summer nights they come out into the streets and while the dogs with impunity, and a man is not safe a moment without a six shooter.

It was here in Shiner that a man was once greatly bothered by these animals, and so just before going to bed he laid a hand full of matches by the side of the bed and also set a bucket of water handy for the benefit of the bugs. During the night when a bug became too fractious the man would strike a match, catch the bug and throw both bug and match in the bucket of water, then he would roll over and go to sleep. This performance was repeated at short intervals all during the night. Along towards morning he was aroused by some very strange noises and striking a light he was amazed to find that the bugs in the bucket had made a raft of the matches and were sailing around the bucket singing "I'll be on the Ocean Wave."
